

What is it like to be married to a lineman?

BY CHRISTINA CALACCI
COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALIST
SAN ISABEL ELECTRIC

When an electric lineworker walks out the door to go to an unusual job in hazardous work conditions at any time of day or night, it is often a spouse who is holding down the fort. Although not the only high stakes profession, the job of lineworker comes with potential hazards the public is often not aware of.

Electric linemen often do their job in extreme or rugged conditions. Many love the excitement and variety of their job and take great pride in their work. But imagine for a minute doing your work outdoors in a hydraulic-powered bucket 40 feet up; in some locations lineworkers must physically climb the poles. Add extreme weather conditions. For example, your sweat is freezing and your feet are numb while making precise repairs to an electric line that, when live, has thousands of volts of electricity running through it.

James Lopez has been a lineworker most of the 19 years of marriage to his wife Amy. She is immensely proud of her husband and his passion for his profession, but the sacrifices she makes and concern for her husband are palpable. Not that she ordinarily shares them or makes a big deal out of them, but it's apparent they are always with her even though they are camouflaged by her strong, have-it-all-together exterior.

"I am definitely always concerned — concerned because it's a dangerous job," Amy says. "He can make a mistake at home and he's okay, but you make a mistake with high voltage and that's it, there's no more."

"It's life or death," she continues. "We know he's going to be working really long hours to get people's power up, but at what expense?" Amy is keenly aware of the sobering possibilities. How has she dealt with the ups and downs of seeing her husband walk out the door for work hundreds of times, over and over again?

"You have to trust the process," she says. "They train all the time. They watch out for themselves. They watch out for each other. James is definitely very good about that; he's thorough in watching over his team, his crew. But when he's working those long hours, it's just in the back of your mind," Amy says. "They've been doing this a long time. They know what they're doing, but I always tell him to be safe. Be safe."

The flipside is how her husband's profession has impacted her. "I'm pretty independent," Amy says. "I feel like you have to be. He does a lot to provide for us, so I'm going to make sure he's not going to worry about us. I'm going to take care of everything here."

Next time the power goes out, remember that electric linemen are working as efficiently and safely as possible to get all of us back to business as usual. No one knows that better than their spouses.

UNCLAIMED CAPITAL CREDITS

Dear San Isabel Electric Association Member:

Most utilities pocket left over money as profit when revenues are more than expenses. San Isabel Electric sets aside that money for member-owners as capital credit, based on the amount of energy each member purchases. When it's financially safe to do so, we retire or return the members' share as a check right in your mailbox. Your capital credits, previously called Sweet Rewards, remain on the books in your name and member number until they are retired.

Members' names whose capital credit checks were issued in September of 2018, that are for $10 or more, and remain unclaimed are listed in the following pages. The complete SIEA list on the website, www.siea.com.

If your name is on this list, please call 719-547-2160 and ask for the capital credits department or email capitalcredits@siea.com. You may be required to provide proof of identity before claiming capital credits.

Reg Rudolph, general manager
